ALBERT BLAND.

That Greenfield is a good town for jewellers is proven by the success of Albert Bland whose place of business is on West Jefferson street. It is but a few months since Mr. Bland came to Greenfield, but in that short time he has built up a lucrative trade. He came here with a most extensive stock and recognizing the value of publicity he used the columns of the REPUBLICAN with what profit may be learned from himself. A practical watch maker and jeweller, he loves his calling with the devotion of an artist. His beautiful store is one of the sights of Greenfield, and now that his holiday stock of watches and clocks, silverware, diamonds, bracelets, chains, charms, lorgnettes, chatelaines and other delightful articles suitable for presents are on exhibition, his place is visited daily by hundreds. Mr. Bland is an expert in the matter of diamonds and he has numerous gems of the first water, both set and unset, to dazzle those who are lovers of precious stones. Many charming pieces of bric-a-brac and articles-de-vertu may be picked up at Bland's at prices far below those of the city. A visit to his store does not cost anything and will prove a revelation to those who are sceptical as to the resources of a jewelry store in a town of 5000.

Mr. Bland's growing business is not only a proof of his enterprise and ability, but is also an infallible criterion of the æsthetic temperament of our citizens.
